History

The History of the Fulton County Public Safety Training Center

The Fulton County Public Safety Training Center (FCPSTC) began operations under the Fulton County Board of Commissioners in October 1987. The initial purpose of the FCPSTC was to provide in- service training for the Fulton County Police Department, Marshal's Office, and Sheriff's Office personnel. The intent was for the FCPSTC to be a true "public safety" training center, providing specialized courses for the Fulton County Fire Department as well.

The FCPSTC was originally located at 4710 Campbell Drive, College Park, in the basement of the Eastern Elementary School, built in 1935. The space made available by the Fulton County School Board where the upper level of the school was occupied by an alternative school until 1991.

In April 1988, the Georgia Post Officers Standards and Training Council (GPOST) designated the FCPSTC as a certified regional training site for Basic Law Enforcement Training. Jacquelyn H. Barrett was the first certified Academy Director for the Training Center.

In April of 2005, the FCPSTC moved to 3025 Merk Road, College Park, occupying the former shooting venue for the 1996 Olympics. In addition to the training center's academic campus, the FCPSTC owns and operates an Emergency Vehicle Operations Course and the David L. Hagins Firing Range.

The Advisory Board and Staff of the Fulton County Public Safety Training Center are proud to present basic law enforcement certification, basic jail certification, specialized, advanced, and in-service training to law enforcement personnel throughout the State.
